stitution, which was administered by the Honorable Joshua Darling, President of the Senate, who then, in presence of both branches of the Legislature, declared His Excellency William Plumer Governor of the State of New Hampshire.

His Excellency then addressed both branches of the Legislature in the following

SPEECH:—

Fellow-Citizens of the Senate, and House of Representatives,

HAVING accepted the office of Governor of New-Hampshire for the present year, permit me to express to you, and through you to the Freemen of the State, my grateful sense of this distinguished honor; and my resolution, aided by your wisdom and experience, so to discharge the duties of this responsible trust, as shall evince to the world that the honors of office are conferred, not for the emolument of the incumbent, but to enable him more effectually to vindicate the rights, and promote the happiness of the people over whom he presides. Though my ambition, to perform acceptably the duties of office, is raised by a consideration of the manner in which my immediate predecessor, for a series of years, has so ably and prudently discharged the duties of Chief Magistrate, I ought not, perhaps, to expect that general approbation, which his long and patriotic services have so justly obtained. May he long continue to enjoy, what he has richly merited, the confidence of a grateful people....the noblest reward of public service; and when, at some distant period, he shall be removed, from this to a better world, may he receive the approving plaudit of his parent, God!

The intimate connexion which subsists between the United States and each individual State in the Union renders the proceedings of the General Government at all times interesting to us, as a member of that Union ; but peculiarly so at this eventful era, in which the state of our foreign relations presents an aspect more truly alarming than at any former period. From both France and England we have long suffered, and still continue to suffer, great injustice. They have unjustly captured and condemned our commerce, imprisoned and held in servitude our seamen, and grossly violated our national rights ; whilst towards both those nations, the government of the United States has steadily and uniformly pursued a course of conduct founded in the strictest justice, and marked with the most impartial neutrality. The government of France, sensible of the wrongs she has inflicted, has, in some measure, changed her conduct towards this country ; and though our suffering citizens have not received restitution for the injuries they have suffered, yet there is ground to hope that we shall eventually obtain substantial justice from that Empire. Should, however, these hopes end in disappointment, I have no doubt our government will eventually adopt such measures as will cause our rights to be duly respected.

But the conduct of Great-Britain towards the United States still manifests a spirit of obstinate perseverance in measures hostile to our dearest interests and most essential rights. She has impressed thousands of our seamen, forced them to serve on board her public ships, and, in the event of a war, will no doubt compel them to shed the blood of their innocent brethren and unoffending countrymen. She has unjustly captured and condemned our vessels and cargoes ; permitted her subjects publicly to forge and counterfeit our ship-papers, and assume the American flag, thereby exciting suspicion against our mercantile character, and subjecting our lawful commerce to capture by other belligerent powers. And, as if these flagrant acts of injustice did not afford sufficient evidence of her deadly hostility, she has sent spies into our country, to alienate the affections of our citizens from their own government, and effect a dismemberment of the Union. Against these outrages and aggressions the government of the United States, preferring negociation to war, has long and patiently sought redress—and even supplicated for justice, till it has approached a state of humiliation incompatible with national dignity. But Great-Britain, goaded on by the prejudices engendered by our revolutionary war, and jealous of our increasing maritime greatness, (a greatness which at no distant period may deprive her of the first rank among commercial nations) has treated our just claims with neglect, and added insult to injury.

In this state of affairs, but one alternative remained, either tamely to surrender our rights, or manfully to prepare for their defence. A nation of freemen could not long hesitate between submission and war. Congress has therefore, with great unanimity, resolved to adopt, and are prosecuting with a correspondent spirit, effective measures for defence; and unless the good sense, or the fears, of Great-Britain shall induce her to do us substantial and speedy justice, these preparations will most probably terminate in a state of war. Though war is a great calamity, the sacrifice of our essential rights is greater. It is with a nation as with an individual; there is a point of suffering beyond which forbearance, instead of repelling, invites aggression. If we cherish a spirit of submission to a foreign power, and tamely acquiesce in the loss of one right after another, we shall thereby prepare the public mind for a state of degradation and servitude, more dreadful in its consequences than that of war; for a nation cannot long survive the loss of its spirit. We have many years enjoyed a state of peace and tranquillity far exceeding that of other people—and what claim have we to an exemption from the calamities common to all nations? Should the government of the United States eventually be compelled, in vindication of our rights, to resort to war, I have entire confidence that, under the protection of Divine Providence, the wisdom of our government, the resources of our country, and the patriotism of our citizens, will be found equal to the arduous conflict. And I trust that the good citizens of N. Hampshire will cordially unite, and at all hazards steadily support those measures which the government of their own choice may adopt, and that we shall have no interest or feeling discordant to that of the Nation.

The constitution of the United States was not only established by the people, but the officers who administer it are elected by the people, and at short and limited periods must return to the rank of citizens, to feel the effects and bear the burthens they themselves have imposed. As the interest of the people is equally their interest, they can have no sufficient motive to make laws injurious to the community; they are therefore entitled to our reasonable confidence, that they will adopt those measures only, which to them appear best calculated to promote the common good. The great and virtuous Washington, speaking of this government, says, “Respect for its authority, compliance with its laws, “acquiescence in its measures, are duties enjoined by “the fundamental maxims of true liberty.” It is one of the first principles of government, that the will of the constituted authorities, expressed by the acts of the majority, demand the obedience of every citizen. Nor is it less the peculiar province of the General Government to direct and manage our national affairs, than it is our indispensable duty and highest interest, to afford them our prompt and effective aid, in carrying into operation all their constitutional measures. Permit me then, Gentlemen, to recommend to you the adoption of such measures, as shall have a direct tendency to assimilate the views and feelings of the good citizens of this State to a friendship with our sister States, and a union of sentiment and firm attachment to the United States. If those who most freely indulge a propensity to complain against the measures of administration, were at the same time obliged to propose a substitute for what they censure, they would find that rulers have frequently but a choice of difficulties, and would themselves be compelled often to approve what they now loudly condemn. It is from a spirit of jealousy and division, that we have more to apprehend, than from the boasted power of both the belligerents of Europe. But as the danger to which we are exposed from abroad increases, may we not reasonably hope that our union among ourselves will also increase. In the infancy of our independence, common danger not only united us, but even supplied, in many cases, the defects of a feeble system of government, which possessed the power to recommend, but not the authority to enforce its requisitions. Union is the vital strength of a nation, particularly so of a Republic, whose authority rests on public opinion. Our union is our safety—a house divided against itself cannot stand. An indissoluble union of the States is essential, not only to our prosperity, but even to our existence as a nation.

The people of the United States are the source of sovereignty; of these the militia of each State compose an essential part, and, when well regulated, form our most "natural and sure defence." The actual State of the nation now requires that we should be placed in the best posture of defence; every measure that tends to the public safety is of the first importance. To render a military force formidable, it must be well organized, armed and disciplined. Though the militia of this State have made considerable progress in obtaining arms, and acquiring a knowledge of military tactics, you will, no doubt, adopt such further measures as may be requisite to complete their improvement. Perhaps no one thing is more necessary than a further supply of arms. And permit me to suggest for your consideration the propriety of directing that all the battalion musters, through the State, should be on one and the same day. Would not such a provision have a tendency to increase the number of arms and accoutrements, by preventing the practice of soldiers borrowing them from each other? Would it not also render regimental musters less necessary, and thus save travel and expense to many of that useful class of citizens?

The restrictions and embarrassments which the belligerents of Europe have unjustly imposed upon our commerce, have induced many of our citizens to devote their time and wealth to the increase and improvement of domestic manufactures. The prosperity of these, will have a direct tendency to render us less dependant upon foreign nations, and more dependant upon ourselves. Blest with a country of various climates, abounding with raw materials of every kind, and a people truly industrious and highly ingenious in the mechanical arts, we are capable of supplying ourselves with the necessities and conveniences, if not with the luxuries of life. By the increase of manufactures we shall enlarge our internal commerce ; and different portions of our country will mutually supply the wants of each other, and add strength to the bond of our Union. To patronize and support agriculture and manufactures is within the peculiar province of the State Legislatures ; and I presume, it is no less your inclination than your duty, to consider whether these important subjects require further legislative aid.

As it is highly probable that the State Prison will, in the course of this season, be completed, it will be necessary that our code of criminal law should be revised, and also police laws enacted for the government of this new and important institution. At the last session of the legislature, a committee was appointed to report bills for these purposes.

The duties imposed by law, on the Judges of the several courts of Probate, require much of their time and attention ; but their fees and emoluments appear to me inadequate. Of the fees received in the probate office, the Register, whose duties are merely mechanical, receives about two thirds, and the Judge, on whom the weight of responsibility rests, has only the remainder. If the fees, allowed to the Judge and Register, are adequate to their services, I submit it the consideration of the Legislature, whether the present apportionment of them is such as their respective services merit.

Acts of incorporation, of various kinds, have within a few years greatly increased in this State ; and many of them, being in the nature of grants, cannot with propriety be revoked without the previous consent of the grantees. Such laws ought therefore to be passed with great caution ; many of them should be limited to a certain period, and contain a reservation authorizing the Legislature to repeal them, whenever they cease to answer the end for which they were made, or prove injurious to the public interest.

As the Electors of President and Vice President of the United States are to be chosen the present year, it will be requisite you should determine the mode in which they shall be chosen in this State.

The time is approaching for the citizens of this State again to elect their Representatives to the Congress of the United States : permit me therefore to recommend to you the propriety of passing a law inflicting a penalty upon the town clerks and sheriffs, who may be delinquent in making due return of votes for members of Congress—there being no statute in force upon that subject.

The period for which one of the Senators from this State to the Congress of the United States was appointed, will expire with the third of March next ; you will determine the time when it will be most proper to fill the vacancy.

As the Constitution has made it necessary, that there should be a new valuation of the rateable estates taken once in every five years, it will be necessary to pass a resolution, authorizing and directing the selectmen of the several towns to take and return the same next year.

The state of the Treasury will be laid before you ; from an examination of which, and your own knowledge of the fiscal concerns of the state, you will decide whether it be proper to raise a tax for the services of the ensuing year.

The people of this State, with great propriety, have made it our express duty “to cherish the interests of literature and science.” All good systems of government, and more especially all republican institutions, are founded on the information and virtue of the people—these constitute the main pillars in the temple of freedom. The moral and social virtues cannot flourish where gross ignorance prevails—without knowledge, the heart cannot be good. Knowledge tends to purify the affections, soften the manners, and exalt the views of a people. Good governments have as much to hope, as bad ones to fear, from a well informed, enlightened people. Let it therefore be our enquiry, whether any further provisions are requisite to improve and extend the means of general information.

Assembled, as you gentlemen are, from the various sections of the State, bringing with you the sentiments and feelings of the people, and being intimately acquainted with their wants and grievances, you are well qualified to provide for the one and redress the other. With unshaken reliance upon that Providence which directs the destiny of States and Nations, let us rise superior to all improper considerations, and with one heart and one mind discharge the duties of our respective stations. It will be my object, as it is my duty, to co-operate with you in such measures as may tend to promote the interest and advance the happiness of our constituents.

WILLIAM PLUMER.

The following communication was received from His Excellency the Governor by Samuel Sparhawk, Esq. Secretary of State.

To the Senate and House of Representatives,

I herewith transmit, for the consideration of the Legislature, a bill for the revision of the criminal laws; and also a bill for the regulation and government of the State Prison, reported by a committee appointed by the Legislature at the last session, together with their letter accompanying those bills.

WILLIAM PLUMER.

June 10, 1812.

The accompanying Letter:

“ To His Excellency William Plumer, Esq: Governor of the State of New-Hampshire.

“ The committee appointed by a resolve of the last session of the Legislature, to revise the code of criminal laws, and to frame regulations for the government of the State Prison, have the honor to present to your Excellency to be communicated to the Legislature, the two bills herewith enclofed, as comprising the provisions, which the committee recommend to the consideration of the Legislature on the subject submitted to them.

“ In attempting the discharge of this duty, it has been the object of the committee, to render the criminal code as mild as the safety of the public and individuals would permit. There are seven crimes, the punishment of which by the present laws of the State, is death. Although this list of capital offences is small, in comparison with the codes of most other countries, the committee, it will be perceived, have thought it would not endanger the well-being of society, to reduce the number to three. Treason, Murder and Rape, are the only crimes which will be capital, if the Legislature should deem it expedient to pass the accompanying bills into laws of the State.

“ Forgery, and the counterfeiting of coins and bank bills, perjury and subornation of perjury, and the different species of larceny, are the offences which seem to call most loudly for further Legislative provisions. The penalties contemplated to be enacted for those offences by the enclosed bills, although considerably exceeding the provisions of existing laws, are yet far below the degree of severity with which neighboring States have thought it necessary to punish the like offences.

We have the honor to be your Excellency's obedient servants.

SIGNED, JEREMIAH MASON,
JOHN GODDARD,
DANIEL WEBSTER.

The committee, appointed to draft an answer to the address of His Excellency the Governor, reported, that they have attended to their duty, and present the following :

May it please your Excellency,

YOUR fellow-citizens of the Senate of New Hampshire tender you their sincere gratulations on your election to the Chief Executive Magistracy of this State.

At this eventful moment, it affords them, in common with their brethren throughout the State, the highest satisfaction to view in their Chief Magistrate a fellow-citizen, whose patriotism, integrity and talents afford the most indubitable pledge, that the vindication of the rights, and the promotion of the happiness of those over whom he presides, will ever be the highest object of his ambition, and engage his most anxious and unremitting exertions.

The Senate cordially unite with your Excellency in bestowing the meed of merited praise on your venerable predecessor in office, whose long and faithful services endear his name to his fellow-citizens, and ensure him in retirement the best wishes of his grateful country.

The measures pursued by our National Government at all times claim our attention; but, at a crisis like the present, when the state of our foreign relations threatens the most alarming evils, they assume a peculiar interest, and excite our most anxious solicitude.

Far removed from the corrupted and corrupting governments of Europe, the United States have wished to pursue an enlightened, peaceful and impartial policy towards all nations, whilst in return they have experienced the most aggravated and outrageous acts of injustice from the belligerents. They have seemed to vie with each other in the most atrocious and unexampled aggressions on our lawful and neutral commerce, in the capture and detention of our citizens, and in the most flagrant violation of our national rights.

If the government of France has either, from a returning sense of justice, or from motives of policy, restrained from further aggression, she still withholds that reparation for injuries and depredations already committed, which our Government, firm and decided as it is just, has demanded; and will, we trust, eventually obtain.

From Great Britain we have long experienced an unremitting and systematic course of measures, alike hostile to our commercial interests and our national rights.

She has captured and condemned our ships on pretexts equally inconsistent with natural justice and the most clear and acknowledged principles of the law of nations.

She has impressed our seamen, held them in the most degrading bondage, and compelled them to fight her battles.

Our citizens have been encouraged and invited to violate our laws; laws which her injustice had rendered necessary.

Her agents have been secretly employed in exciting our citizens to treasonable combinations against their own government, at a time when she was making the most solemn professions of friendship towards us.

Her wrongs and injustice have followed one another in continued succession and increasing magnitude, until we are reduced to the alternative, either to surrender those rights for which our fathers bravely fought, or prove our claim to be considered their legitimate descendants, by buckling on the shield and drawing the sword in their defence. Betwixt abject submission and an appeal to the sword freeborn Americans cannot, for a moment, hesitate in making a choice:—our government have made the election, have pronounced “WAR RATHER THAN SUBMISSION;” and every genuine American voice has already added its sanction.

We would still hope that Great Britain and France would stop in their mad career of injustice and hostility, and thus prevent the necessity of an appeal to arms; but should it prove otherwise, your Excellency may be assured, the citizens of New-Hampshire will take no council from fear; but, confiding in the justice of their cause, the virtue and valor of her sons, and the guardianship of that Providence which presides over the destinies of nations, as in the days which are past, bravely meet and repel our haughty and oppressive foes.

However foreign nations may have flattered themselves that we are a divided people, incapable of supporting the government of our own choice, we trust the morning already begins to dawn, and the day to approach, when the great body of the American people will wipe away the foul aspersion, and show the world, that they have in no wise forfeited their character for virtue, intelligence and love of country.

The Senate duly appreciate the importance of the Militia, as the natural and sure defence of our country's rights, and with your Excellency feel it their duty to give their utmost aid to promote its most perfect organization and effective discipline.

Heirs of a country blest with a variety of climates, and a soil adapted to the production of every material for supplying the necessaries and conveniences of life ; a people second to none on earth in enterprise, industry and ingenuity in the mechanic arts ; the time we believe rapidly approaches, when we shall cease to look to any foreign nation for those things which contribute to the happiness of civilized man.

It will be our greatest pleasure as it is our duty, to aid in extending patronage to Agriculture and to those Manufactures which will render us truly independent of foreign nations.

Virtue and knowledge are the fair pillars which must support, as well as adorn our republican institutions. A legislative attention to them is requisite, continued in proportion to their importance.

To the other very important subjects submitted to their notice in your Excellency's communication, the attention of the Senate will be duly directed.

Confident that we shall experience your Excellency's cheerful co-operation in every measure tending to promote the happiness of our beloved country, and in humble reliance upon that superintending Providence which, in times past, has so signally interposed for our deliverance from tyranny and oppression, and from a handful of people has made us a numerous, powerful and happy nation—we enter with alacrity upon the duties assigned us by our fellow-citizens, and tender your Excellency our most cordial wishes for your health and happiness.

After reading the foregoing answer, Mr. Vose moved to strike out the following section, viz.

"If the government of France has either, from a returning sense of justice, or from motives of policy, refrained from further aggression, she still withholds that reparation for injuries and depredations already committed, which our Government, firm and decided as it is just, has demanded; and will, we trust, eventually obtain."
